

Think of what your students could achieve if they had...

- ✓ More self-confidence
- ✓ Better communication skills
- ✓ Clearer understanding about self and others

Teenagers are using their time in schools to prepare themselves to become adults and shape their personalities for life!

Therefore, helping them understand themselves and others is a critical step for their future development.

You can now use a great assessment tool, called PRISM Brain Mapping, to help your students grow self-awareness, understand their behavioral preferences, and identify their natural strengths, such that they move forward with confidence and respect.

By using the latest research methods in Neuroscience, your students will receive a comprehensive and personalized 12-page report about themselves after they have completed a standard questionnaire (online or offline, depending on your requirements).

The whole process is very straight forward and you will have full control it:

- 1 You attend a 3-hour PRISM Brain Mapping training session so you know how our assessment should be used.
- 2 Your students complete a standard questionnaire (online or offline). This should take around 15 min.
- 3 We will generate for you the report of each student. You can discuss these reports individually or in a group.

Data are kept strictly confidential. Give your students a chance to better understand themselves, so as to make the right choice before attending universities!
